Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Saturday 18 Dec 2021

UK Outlook for Thursday 23 Dec 2021 to Saturday 1 Jan 2022:
It is expected to turn unsettled towards Christmas, particularly in the south, as a front approaches bringing cloud to the southwest, as well as rain and possibly wintry conditions to parts of the country. Whereas the drier weather may continue elsewhere for a time with variable cloud cover, although occasional showers may be possible for northern and eastern coastal regions. Rather cold in the north but turning milder across the south. During this time some stronger winds are possible, although these are likely to be confined to southern regions. Settled conditions however, are likely to continue towards the end of the year with the potential for frost and fog. Temperatures likely to be rather cold with overnight frosts and increased risk of fog.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.